

CONVENTION ATTENDANT INSTRUCTIONS

1. Those who serve as convention attendants should be exemplary spiritual men, known for demonstrating the fruitage of the spirit in their lives and in their dealings with others. (Gal. 5:22, 23) They should be helpful and pleasant in caring for their responsibilities. Attendants should remain alert at all times, not becoming complacent or lackadaisical in fulfilling their responsibilities.

2. Attendant Meeting: There will be a meeting with all attendants one hour before the doors open for general admission on the first day of the convention. At the meeting, the attendant overseer will review the duties of the attendants as well as any safety measures that need to be taken. The meeting will conclude in time for all attendants to be at their assigned positions no later than 15 minutes prior to when the doors are opened. Emergency procedures for the facility will be reviewed so that all attendants will know their duties in the event of an evacuation or other emergency.

3. Assignments: Attendants are to remain in their assignments at all times until they are relieved of their duty or replaced by another attendant. All who serve as attendants should wear the Attendant (CO-19a) badge card.

4. Below is a partial list of attendant duties, which may vary depending on the location of each attendant and the particular needs of the facility being used:

- Helping individuals to locate seats
- Taking a count of those in attendance
- Assisting the elderly, the disabled, and those with small children to seating locations and on stairs
- Distributing programs and providing department location information
- Providing crowd control inside and immediately outside the facility
- Monitoring escalators, elevators, stairs, and fire alarm pull stations
- Monitoring corridors and all building access points
- Monitoring and recording temperature
- Monitoring and controlling access to the stage and other sensitive areas
- Monitoring the baptism area
- Handling difficulties
- Assisting in case of an evacuation or other emergency
- Contacting First Aid

5. Attendants are organized into groups of sufficient size to care for their assigned areas before, during, and after the program. Larger areas have an assigned captain. (In a multilevel facility, several attendant captains and their attendant groups will be organized under the direction of a level captain.) All captains work under the direction of the attendant overseer and his assistant.

6. Before the doors to the facility open each day, all attendants should be at their assigned locations to monitor and prevent any unsafe actions on the part of those entering. No one should be allowed to run or to move about in an unsafe manner. Attendants should kindly assist all to avoid accidents.

7. Entrances, Exits, and Corridors: It is important not to allow entry into the corridors before 8:00 a.m. so that the attendants and other departments can get organized before the crowd arrives. In order to conserve energy, attendants should ensure that exterior doors are not propped open in air-conditioned or heated buildings.

8. Seating: No one should save seats overnight or prior to the time when the doors to the building are opened each day, including attendants and other volunteers. At all times, attendants should be alert to assist those who need seats or who need to be escorted on stairs and should remain attentive to any potential disturbances. When the doors to the building open at 8:00 a.m., attendants can save seats within their own sections for themselves, those living in their home, those traveling with them in the same vehicle, and their current Bible students. Each attendant should monitor those coming into his assigned area to make sure that this same practice is followed by all, reminding attendees to follow direction provided by the organization on seat saving. Attendants should care for their assignments in a manner that will not distract others. It is helpful if those with small children are seated where they can enter and exit easily without being a distraction. Attendants should assist disabled, elderly, and infirm ones who wish to be seated in the areas reserved for them and should continue to be alert to such individuals, always treating them with dignity, respect, and love.

9. Baby strollers and lawn chairs are not permitted in the regular seating areas of the facility. The attendants should tactfully and lovingly approach attendees with these items and help them to appreciate that this restriction protects their child and others from injury. The attendants should explain the options of securing a car seat or an infant seat on a seat next to the parents, holding the child in their laps, or asking a friend to assist. Parents may decide to take the stroller back to the car or put it in the checkroom. Strollers and lawn chairs may be used for disabled children and adults, but are permissible only in the disabled section.

10. Once the program begins, the attendants should take the initiative to seat latecomers. This can be accomplished by good communication between the attendants at entry points and those in seating areas. The attendant should ask attendees as they enter whether they are looking for seats. If so, he will keep the attendees at his side and signal to a seating attendant the number of seats that are needed. The attendant in the seating area will signal how many he has available. Each seating attendant should regularly examine his section and check with those sitting next to seats with items placed on them. Thus, he will know if the seats are occupied by someone who has temporarily left or if they are unoccupied. If his section is full, the attendant at the entry point can check with attendants in other sections to see where seats are available and direct attendees accordingly.

11. Attendance Count: Attendants will be informed of the times to take a count of those in their assigned section. The count should be taken without causing unnecessary distraction to those attending. All adults should be counted, as should young children who are listening and benefiting, even to a limited extent.

12. Handling Distractions: Audiences could be disturbed by such things as attendees talking, latecomers looking for seats, noise from cell phones or other electronic devices, and disruptive children. Attendants should be alert to handle distractions in a loving, kind manner. They should closely monitor people congregating by themselves in remote seating or other areas. It may become necessary to suggest in a kindly way that such individuals return to their seats. The Quiet Please (CO-132) sign can be used judiciously if someone is disturbing others by talking, making noise, or causing a commotion.

13. Safety: Attendants should be alert at all times to any potentially dangerous or unsafe situations. These could be due to building defects, faulty or unsafe use of chairs, or objects of any kind being left in the aisles. Especially hazardous are uneven floors, irregular stairs, seating riser joints, and loose handrails. When wet floors are encountered, the attendant should direct attendees around the wet area and have it reported to the Cleaning Department. If there are large openings in guard rails where children could fall through and be injured, the attendant should report these to the attendant overseer, who will check with the Convention Committee coordinator for direction. Children should not be allowed to sit in rows next to railings where they could fall through and injure themselves. In multilevel facilities, attendants should remind individuals not to lean over the railings or place any items on the ledge(s) of the upper level(s). If the attendant cannot correct a situation, he should alert the attendant overseer, who will immediately report it to the Convention Committee Office so it can be corrected.

14. Emergencies: If a nonmedical emergency arises, attendants should immediately contact the attendant overseer or his assistant for direction. In case of a medical emergency, attendants should immediately notify the First Aid Department so that our first-aid personnel can render assistance and call emergency services if necessary. Each attendant should have a flashlight with him in the event of a power failure. He should also be familiar with the location of the First Aid Department and how to contact it immediately in case of an emergency.

15. Escalators and Elevators: Escalators and elevators should never be left unattended. If possible, elevators should be operated by an attendant. Escalators should have an attendant stationed at the top and at the bottom. These attendants should know how to stop the escalator in case of an emergency. Attendants assigned to escalators and elevators should be alert to how these are being used and should especially assist elderly and young ones to be careful when using them.

16. Stage: No one should be allowed on, in front of, or behind the stage in order to take pictures or video at any time during the program. The attendants should also make sure that no one blocks the view of any section of the audience while taking pictures or video.

17. Dealing With Disruptive Individuals: Attendants should be alert to individuals who may enter the premises with ulterior motives. If there is a cause for concern, an attendant should first approach the person and greet him, which may lead to his motives becoming clear. In some cases, it may be necessary to monitor the individual's activity. If a person begins to act in a disorderly manner, especially if he approaches the stage, the attendant should intervene. If order cannot be restored, he and other attendants should kindly ask the person to leave the premises and should immediately inform the attendant overseer and Convention Committee Office. At no time should an attendant initiate physical contact of any kind with the individual.

18. Other Departments: Attendants should be familiar with the location of various departments, such as First Aid, the Convention Committee Office, the Chairman's Office, Lost and Found, and so forth. This will enable them to assist when individuals inquire. Persons inquiring about any accounts-related matters should be directed to the Convention Committee Office. Attendants are to allow other volunteers and those with appropriate identification access to areas where they are needed in order to fulfill their assigned duties.

19. Attendants must always conduct themselves in harmony with the admonition: "Follow the course of hospitality."—Rom. 12:13; 1 Pet. 2:12.
